REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

To the Trustees of Wellesley College:

I have the honor to present the report for the year 1948-49, the seventy-fourth session of Wellesley College.

The Board of Trustees

The Board was saddened and weakened by the death on January 18 of Professor Theodore Spencer of Harvard University who had been a trustee of Wellesley since 1943. He had accepted the chairmanship of the Library Committee of the Board and was already in conference about the problems of that important part of the College when his untimely death deprived Wellesley of a wise counselor and the larger educational world of one of its ablest scholars.

The resignation of Professor Paul J. Sachs of Harvard deprived the Board of an expert in academic and artistic circles whose judgment has carried much weight on the Board since his election to it in 1937. It was with great reluctance that he was allowed to withdraw before the expiration of his term of service but his argument that his health required it was unanswerable.

Clarence B. Randall of Chicago accepted membership on the Board in 1946 with considerable hesitation in view of an over-full schedule. He served us royally in his official trustee capacity during the 75th Anniversary Fund campaign in the Chicago area and for that service we are deeply indebted to him. His resignation, while it was anticipated in view of his frequent warnings that it might be forthcoming, was accepted with great regret but with much appreciation of his service during his brief term of office.

The retirement of Lily Ross Taylor, Dean of the Graduate School of Bryn Mawr College, brings to an end the term of the third faculty trustee. The nomination of a member of the Board to be a special spokesman for faculty interests, not only at Wellesley but in the rest of the educational world, is an interesting device. Miss Taylor's acquaintance with the problems of other institutions has helped to put Wellesley's concerns into a proper perspective, and her forthright comments and constructive suggestions will be missed by her colleagues on the Board.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE

At the end of the academic year Governor Frank G. Allen completed a twenty-one year term as trustee. It is hard to imagine the College without his active participation in the work of the Finance Committee of which he has been the able chairman since 1946, the Buildings and Grounds Committee to which he has given invaluable technical assistance as well as imaginative interest, the Executive Committee, and the Endowment Committee. Perhaps no one appreciated more than the President his generosity of spirit and his insistence on building well. He was always on the side of good, permanent construction, physical and educational, saving even the pennies when possible, but spending the dollars generously when they were needed for sound growth. As one of the major contributors to the 75th Anniversary Fund he has attested in every way to his belief in the College he has done so much to build.

The recruits on the Board bring to it a variety of gifts and promise great strength as they take office. At the May meeting the Academic Council nominated and the Board elected Sirarpie Der Nersessian, long Professor of Art at Wellesley College and now Professor of Byzantine Art and Archeology at Dumbarton Oaks Research Library and Collection of Harvard University. Miss Der Nersessian's familiarity with Wellesley, the high regard in which she is held by all who worked with her here, and her distinction as a scholar, widely known and universally respected at home and abroad, make her a valued asset.

At the deferred meeting of the annual meeting held on commencement day two other trustees were elected. Eleanor Wallace Allen, Wellesley B.A. 1925, has been an alumna whose loyalty has been tested in countless ways. In the 75th Anniversary Fund campaign she has been the Projects and Benefits Chairman and a wise adviser on the Executive Committee.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

She knows the College intimately and has shown herself to be an alumna in whose judgment other alumnae have great confidence. Her residence in Boston makes her easily available for help at all times and seasons, and the fact that she is the wife of Governor Allen is not the least of her assets.

The election of Judge Jacob J. Kaplan brings to the Board a distinguished lawyer, civic leader, and resident of the Greater Boston community. His active participation in many Jewish organizations enhances his value to a college which is avowedly Christian in origin and purpose. Healthy relationship between members of different faiths is one of the fine arts of modern life, and Judge Kaplan's presence on the Board underscores Wellesley's sincerity in expressing its conviction that the fulfillment of its Christian purpose obligates it to "increase understanding and goodwill among Christians of all varieties and between Christians and non-Christians".

The most widely publicized addition to the Board is that of the eighth president, Margaret Clapp of the Class of 1930, who comes to Wellesley from the faculty of Brooklyn College. Her varied experience since her graduation, her academic distinction, her charm and skill in human relations make her the universally accepted choice for the presidency. She will bring to the Board—as to all other parts of the College—keen insight and wise judgment and the enthusiastic confidence of the constituent elements of the institution.

Withdrawals from the Faculty and Staff

The retirement of Elizabeth Donnan marks the end of twenty-nine years of uninterrupted service to Wellesley College. For the last three years she has been on leave of absence but her physical absence from the campus has not kept her from contributing to the academic distinction of the College. Indeed the assumption of the title Emeritus Professor will not stop this active service to the College which has come to think of this Cornell graduate as one of Wellesley's own.

Professor Emeritus Muriel Streibert Curtis leaves the Department of Biblical History after thirty-nine years of continuous service to it and to the rest of the College. In addition to her many hours of classroom teaching and of committee work she has done an unusual amount to identify the College with the work of the church through her writing in the field of religious education. As she is freed to devote a larger part of her time to that work she will continue to enhance the standing of the College. By reason of a particular need in the department Mrs. Curtis will return in the fall to offer one course in the first semester, an arrangement which helps to minimize the drastic loss involved in her departure from active duty.

Professor Emeritus Mary A. Griggs has been a vocal spokesman for early retirements. Practicing what she preached has deprived the College in advance of legal necessity of one of its most useful members. It was fitting and proper that she should devote a large amount of time in this her last year of teaching to the chairmanship of the Anniversary Conference on Science, for through the years she has been noted for her all-college administrative ability. It is hard to think of the Department of Chemistry without her.

For nearly a quarter of a century Mrs. John R. Nichols has carried a large part of the load of the education department as teacher, librarian, secretary, administrative assistant, personal counselor to faculty and students. Her retirement from the part-time position she has occupied in these later years leaves a vacancy it will be difficult to fill.

Several years before the time of her normal retirement Associate Professor Jeannette B. Lane leaves the faculty this year. With appreciation for her service to the department of speech during the past ten years, her colleagues wish her well in her independent venture in speech instruction.

In his twenty-fifth year of service Mr. Wilford Hooper, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, accepted an appointment at Harvard University as Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds for the Medical School District. He takes with him the good wishes of countless friends who are grateful for a quarter of a century of his faithful concern for the interests of Wellesley College.

PRESIDENT'S REPORT

The Alumnae Association

The completion of the terms of service of Joy Scheidenhelm Taylor, '24, as President of the Alumnae Association, and of Alice Morton Claflin, '10, as chairman of the Alumnae Fund Committee cannot be allowed to pass unnoticed. They have seen the College through a world war, a 75th Anniversary Fund campaign, a change of presidencies, implementation of new by-laws, all manner of organizational complications. The co-operation of these self-forgetful alumnae and all the other members of the Board of the Association is one of the great strengths of Wellesley College.

To the new officers, and especially to Caroline Taylor White, '15, the Association's new president, all groups in the College look with assurance that their tried and true loyalty through all the years behind will assure success for the affairs under their jurisdiction in the years ahead.

The Program of the Year

An academic year is composed mainly of the regular work of the College, the classroom activities of faculty and students, the social program centering in the dormitories, the vast complex of individual and group activities which constitute the community life of the institution. No president's report can do justice to the virility and significance of these activities. Let me pick out only a few samples to remind the trustees that the College is a stimulating, problematic, challenging institution.

The 75th Anniversary has been the occasion for some unusual and unusually profitable experiences. Dr. Koussevitzky brought the Boston Symphony Orchestra to open the concert series in recognition of this celebration as he had so memorably opened the first series a quarter of a century before. The library prepared a distinctive exhibition of book collections which might have been made by students at various stages of the college history.

The entire college participated in the Science Conference which brought to the College on March 16, 17, and 18 a distinguished group of lecturers together with representatives from forty-three colleges. Around the general theme of "Energy" there were lectures by such scientists as James Bryant Conant, Robert F. Bacher, Cecilia Payne-Gaposchkin, Wolfgang Köhler, Gerty Cori, and Edmund W. Sinnott. By exciting the undergraduates to real intellectual curiosity and enthusiasm, this conference demonstrated the creative possibilities of inter-departmental activity. It established a standard for campus-wide participation in a joint educational venture which will be good to maintain for years ahead. The grateful thanks of the entire college go to the faculty committee and its student associates.

It was interesting that as the 75th Anniversary approached the faculty should happen to include an unusually large number of foreign members. Wellesley has long acknowledged its debt to students who have come to it from all quarters of the globe, and through the years has included many European visitors in its teaching staff. It happened this year to have three teachers outside the language departments who came from the Far East. Mrs. Kuo-Sieu Wong Sun in the Department of History and Miss Zung-Nyi Loh in the Department of Mathematics came to us directly from China. Mr. Kwang-Won Kim in the Department of Biblical History is Korean by birth though his training has been largely in America. In addition to these faculty colleagues, we welcomed as a special visitor Miss Tomo Tambe. As a member of the Kobe College faculty in Japan she was selected to visit the United States with a view to studying the administrative procedures in a four-year woman's college. Her presence at Wellesley added much to the interest of the year and we think she probably knows more now about the organization of the College than does anybody else! The presence of these colleagues makes the Far East seem near instead of far.

The vigor of the language departments in introducing students to the culture of the lands where the languages are spoken is a chronic fact of the college program. The correlation of work in Russian language with music interpretation, experimentally introduced by Mr. Jedrzejewicz, the Goethe celebration of the German department, and the production in the swimming pool of Aristophanes' "Frogs" by the Greek department have all enlarged the world in which twentieth-century American undergraduates live. The many off-campus contacts of members of the French, Spanish, and Italian departments further relate the College to the foreign-language groups here and abroad.

Encouragement to foreign graduate students was given by the action instituting a Certificate in American Studies available for graduates of foreign universities who cannot spend two years to acquire a master's degree but would like some evidence of accomplishment for a year's study. Furthermore it is believed that a course to introduce foreign guests to American culture may be more profitable for visitors than one devoted to academic disciplines which might be pursued in any country and perhaps better in a graduate school of a university.

Undergraduates have contributed to the enrichment of the College by giving part of their gift to the 75th Anniversary Fund in the form of scholarships for two displaced students from Europe. They assumed responsibility not only for the expenses (over and above tuition which was waived by the trustees) but will make necessary provision for vacation travel and entertainment for the two young women who will enter next fall.

This pre-anniversary year has been a good one for taking stock on a number of matters. A special committee of the Academic Council has been working on the formulation of long-term policies in connection with admission. Its work of this year was largely an analysis of present practice, resulting in a summary statement of present practice which was adopted by the Academic Council as a basis for further deliberations.

A new plan for honors work was instituted with interesting results. Instead of notifying all students whose academic standing gave them minimum eligibility for admission to honors, the list was sent to all departments and invitations were then extended to those students whom the department would be willing to accept as candidates. This made departmental planning simpler and prevented applications from students whose interests did not seem to justify admission to honors in spite of minimum grade requirements. This kind of adjustment seemed especially important in departments where the introduction of large numbers of honors students poses practical problems of teaching loads.

The departmental annual reports include recurrent requests for more office space, more time for research, more visual aids, more technical equipment of all kinds, more money for salaries to bring the best candidates for positions rather than the least-demanding, more travel money for intercollegiate gatherings, and always more books. The library budget has been stretched to the breaking point with the increased cost of books and binding, and even the increased budget for 1949-50 will not solve the problem of making desirable additions to the various collections.

It is a source of great satisfaction to the President as well as to the individual faculty members involved that the trustees have authorized the construction of five new faculty houses on the property on Washington Street adjacent to the golf course. The plans for an additional apartment house for faculty members are far advanced and this recognition by the trustees of the importance of adequate living quarters will mean much to the morale of the teaching staff. Interestingly enough the argument for additional housing is tied directly to that for office space. An instructor living in crowded quarters with a growing family needs an office in which to work without interruption.

The Budget—Balanced

A year ago this report dealt at some length with problems of financing the independent college. That section ended with the assurance that it would "be my effort in the year ahead to make proposals which may make it possible to come closer, at least, to a balanced budget". The budget for next year as presented by the Assistant Treasurer is balanced but not because of clever proposals by the President. There are three factors which explain the possibility of reviving the tradition of going through a year without spending more than is received in current income.

Economy. The Curriculum Committee of the Academic Council asked and received the cooperation of all the departments in an analysis of their costs and a study of their procedures to see if they could cut expenditures. The heads of the administrative offices met for a similar discussion of possible economies. The business management reviewed established practices and curtailed expenditures wherever possible. The concerted efforts of all the many individuals concerned kept the expenditure side of the budget to the minimum consistent with continued operation of the College in its present form.

Consideration was given to drastic revisions as mentioned a year ago. The possibility of reducing the size of the College so that neither village houses nor a new dormitory would be necessary was studied and rejected. The elimination of graduate work was reviewed in the light of departmental interests and it was concluded that a general policy of withdrawal of graduate work would not save enough money to justify the cost in educational stimulus in certain departments. The presence of foreign graduate students was recognized as a positive asset. The use of graduate students as assistants in some departments was recognized as valuable, though the finding of adequate assistants who can afford to take their graduate work with the small stipends that we pay is increasingly difficult. There was, however, no zeal for emphasizing graduate work unless it be in the Department of Hygiene and Physical Education where larger numbers would make for economy of operation. That department cooperated in the economy study by estimating the amount which would be saved by eliminating the professional school altogether. There are recurrent suggestions that this professional school is not appropriately a part of a liberal arts college. At the request of the President, the department studied its contribution to the undergraduate life of the College and produced convincing evidence that without its graduate students there would need to be an increase in the teaching staff devoting itself to undergraduates and there would, therefore, be no appreciable saving in the department budget. This presumes, of course, the maintenance of the present program of supervised activity in indoor and outdoor sports. The willingness of departments to cooperate in the inquiry into such extreme measures as their virtual extinction is indicative of the cooperation by which the budget has been balanced.

Increase in Fees. The decision to increase the undergraduate fees to $1,600 was made early in the year. This action met with sympathetic understanding on the part of parents and students and was, indeed, recommended by responsible groups of alumnae on the instigation of some parents who felt that the public should not be asked to contribute to the 75th Anniversary Fund while the fees were so far from meeting the expense of educating an individual student. While there was little objection raised, it seems probable that there is a connection between the increase in fees and the increase in withdrawals from the upper classes and the freshmen admitted in June. During the war years there were very few upperclass withdrawals during the summer. This year there have been seventy-four. While many of these represent transfer to other types of college or university, plans to marry, and all the other factors with which we are familiar, the economic one often figures in all the rest. The Board of Admission admitted a large class from as many applications as were received in the preceding year but has had to accept more students than usual from the waiting list because of the number of withdrawals. That there was such a satisfactory application list in a year of declining enrollments in colleges in general may be attributed in large part to the interest in Wellesley cultivated and maintained by the extended trips of Miss Chase, the Director of Admission.

The increased income from the larger fees is of course a large part of the balanced budget income and will be a continuously useful income so long as it does not preclude the admission of girls from low-income group families. It may be the prejudice of a preacher's daughter and wife, but it seems to me unfortunate to have only seven ministers' daughters in a graduating class of three hundred and fifty-nine as we did this June. In the whole student body the number was twenty-three. There are too few college professors' children, too few students from the less well paid professional groups although they have a large proportion of the scholarship awards. We reiterate, also, the need for students representing families which have not traditionally sent their children to college, and scholarships may help to encourage such groups to think of the possibility of higher education for their young people.

The 75th Anniversary Fund. The third factor in helping to balance the budget was the income from the Fund raised for salaries and for the scholarship purposes which the increased fees make so urgent. As of June 30 the Fund stands at $3,351,-279. Of this amount $944,944 has been designated for faculty salaries, $1,370,740 for scholarships, $10,510 for the dormitory, and $69,800 for the library. $510,557 has been added to the Fund since this time last year, but the total is still far below the goal which is hoped for by June 1950.

A half-million dollars is a lot of money, but more important than the increase in the Fund has been the accomplishment in organizing a long-range plan of development to provide for post-campaign increases in the resources of the College. Under the continued chairmanship of Marie Rahr Haffenreffer, '11, and the skillful direction of Margery S. Foster, '34, who have been with the Fund organization since its inception, the plan of development has been planned organizationally. The counsel of Mr. Harold J. Seymour in this connection has been invaluable as he brought his experience in many other academic institutions to bear on the future plans of this one. The decision to change the emphasis from a dated campaign to a permanent development plan was an inevitable one in view of the financial situation facing colleges in this country, but the strategy of transition was one for which we have to thank these Fund leaders.

The basic administrative difference between the pre-campaign plan of organization and the new plan of development is essentially the maintenance of a regional plan of organization among alumnae and non-alumnae as well as a class appeal which had characterized alumni fund plans during the last twenty-five years. The class as a unit for fund raising has long been an effective one and it would be most unfortunate to lose it as a source of strength. It is true, however, that the wide experience of community fund raising is directing the thought of all planners to devices which are inappropriate for the diffuse class organization. The use of personal solicitation by call or telephone, the "project and benefit" technique, the adaptation of the appeal to local interest—all these make a geographic structure important for fund raising. The sentiment of class loyalty can be used to strengthen other appeals but the College must stand on its own merits as an object for the gifts of its alumnae, and it seems important not to bank too much upon the fact of personal friendship with one's classmates.

The basic financial difference between the pre-campaign plan of organization and the new plan of development is one of method and amount. Instead of thinking of the Alumnae Fund as the channel for small, token gifts of a few dollars apiece, alumnae are now asked to think of the claim of the College on a proportionate share of their annual budgets for gifts. Emphasis will also be put on encouraging gifts from capital for capital expenditures by the College. Of course there must be no minimizing of the importance to Wellesley of the financial contribution of the graduate who can afford to give only a dollar a year. Ours is not the only college which has learned, however, that the stress on the importance of a high percentage of contributors, however small the individual gift, has encouraged the potentially large donor to think in too small terms. The plan of development will urge the consideration of the size of the gift in proportion to the total needs of the College and the total gift budget of the donor.

The coordination of appeals is an important problem. At the end of the year a letter went from this office to all the alumnae who had not contributed to the 75th Anniversary Fund. It was a genuine inquiry as to the reason for non-participation of the fourteen percent of the graduates who were not listed as contributors. The statistical tabulation of the replies has not been completed as I write, but the first answers which came back were revealing of the confusion of people who thought they had given to the Fund because they had helped with a club project for Students' Aid or had sent class dues. The simplification of relationships to the College will be an important asset of the proposed plan of development. Parenthetically, my apologies are herewith presented publicly to those donors whose checks had been received in the Fund office before my letters were in the mail. Their surprised replies to my inquiry were notable for their patience. With rare exceptions the few victims of clerical errors demonstrated the tolerance and understanding of human frailty which we like to think people acquire at Wellesley. The firm rebukes of the few who will have nothing further to do with a college which failed to record their gifts properly and is therefore inexcusably inefficient are a kind of negative tribute to alumnae expectations for their alma mater. May the future fulfill those expectations of perfection.

"The Searching Committee"

The most important event of the year from the point of view of the President was the selection of the new President by the committee officially appointed by the Chairman of the Board to find and nominate that officer. Almost immediately it became known as the searching committee, and in its method and result it established a pattern of excellence unsurpassed. Its assignment was complicated by a time factor imposed by a concern for the welfare of the College.

The transition from a 75th Anniversary campaign to a long-range plan of development called for planning and personnel which could carry over from one stage to the next. I was increasingly sure that I should not continue indefinitely in the presidency. It seemed clear that, in view of my marriage and the obligations and privileges it gave me away from the College, the sooner the presidential authority could be transferred to someone who would be with the College for a considerable period, the better it would be for the College. It was therefore agreed that if possible the searching committee should find within the academic year. This involved a pressure on the members for which I should feel most apologetic if it had not produced such an eminently satisfactory result. It is not for me, who was of course not a member of the committee, to describe in detail its procedures. Let me merely comment on the fact of its structure. It is not every committee in search of a president which has faculty representation and this characteristic of Wellesley's searching committee was an important element in its strength. Dean Whiting and Professor Coolidge were elected by the Academic Council by a system of proportional representative balloting. They had the largest number of votes on a ballot to elect a committee of five faculty members to serve as a faculty group to collect suggestions about the new president. Their membership on both the Council committee and the official committee of the Board of Trustees established a sense of confidence within the faculty which will mean much to the new president and to the College as a whole.

The Chairman of the Board cannot be thanked enough for his wholehearted concern for and direction of the functioning of the committee, nor for his good judgment in its selection. By action of the Board the committee was to consist of two members of the faculty elected by the Academic Council, two alumnae trustees, and five others of whom the chairman of the Board was to be one. The chairman was to be Dr. Perkins as chairman of the Board. His selection of the following committee insured a successful search: Mr. O. Kelley Anderson, Mrs. Theodore C. Haffenreffer, Mrs. Harold D. Hynds, Mrs. Lee B. Morey, Dr. John C. Schroeder, Mr. Edward Weeks; and Dean Whiting and Professor Coolidge representing the Academic Council.

That the committee presented the name of Margaret Clapp is all the evidence which is needed to attest to their insight into the needs of the College.

In Conclusion

Thirteen years have passed with incredible speed. As I reread the President's Report for 1936-37 it is hard to believe that so much has happened since that first year when I was becoming acquainted with a college which I described then as a place of "intellectual vigor, of organizational efficiency, and of gracious friendliness".

It seems to me still a place of unquestioned intellectual vigor, a college whose faculty has steered its way effectively through the confusions of a war period. Its methods of instruction are sound, rigorous, commanding of respect on the part of those who learn and those who teach. There have been periods during these thirteen years when I have been fearful that the joy of learning was being sacrificed in the name of thoroughness. This constant occupational hazard of college faculties seems to me to be averted at present perhaps by reason of the intellectual homogeneity and distinction of the student body. Perhaps a factor in easing some of the strain of intellectual activity has been the introduction of so much variety into the academic life of the College. Of the writing of papers there seems to be no end, but there is after all a large amount of "field work", seminar discussion, demonstrations, manual art reporting—charts, map-making—countless means of expression within the authorized academic framework. The revised curriculum has retained the assets of the old but introduced a flexibility of adjustment to the established interests of mature students which is moving in the right direction. Less and less is now learned "in vacuo". What she can do with what she knows has become a concern of students in all areas of instruction and is accepted as appropriate by their teachers as well.

Even in 1936 there was some carry-over of the days when it was necessary to subject women students to hard discipline for the sake of hardness—to prove their ability to be genuine scholars. The intervening years have carried the College along with the tide of American life to the era when women's colleges are judged on their educational merit without having to be on the defensive because they are for women. Some of the beligerent attitude of the early days of higher education for women expressed itself in unreasonable requirements—to show that women could take it. Those days seem to be over and with their departure has come a release of some tension.

New strains have developed with the growth of the College, numerically and financially. This is growth which was unanticipated, unsought, but has seemed to be inevitable with the development of the times. In 1936-37 there were 1,498 students; in 1948-49, 1,744. This enlargement resulted from war pressure to admit more and more students but it has created problems of housing, of instruction, of organization. There was a kind of compactness of life which went along with smaller numbers in prewar years which some of us miss today. The President of the College Government Association expressed something which others have felt when she wrote in her annual report, "In a college as efficient and busy as Wellesley it is hard to maintain the kind of close, friendly community in which students truly learn to work together with sympathy, understanding, and trust." Size is only one of the complicating factors in the modern college as compared with the relative simplicity of even twelve years ago. Surely there is more organizational activity on the campus, and vastly more pull of faculty and students off the campus. The increasing identification of faculty members with community projects of all kinds makes for a kind of scattering existence which is hard on the contemplative life.

Business matters which have required an increasingly large staff still require an increasingly large amount of time and attention from the officers of administration. A budget of $3,486,783 as compared with $1,783,257 twelve years earlier represents some inflation, but it also involves new and complicated methods. The introduction of a union of domestic and maintenance staff employees has required drastic reorganization of the business offices. New presuppositions about the relation of employees to educational administration have entered the academic picture and these years have been ones in which these problems of reorganization have had to be dealt with. I was interested to be reminded from the report of twelve years ago that a committee had been appointed to see if it would be possible to prepare a statement of Wellesley's educational policy, and announcement was made that three groups of guests would use the campus during the summer. This summer will see eleven different organizations conferring for longer or shorter periods during the summer vacation period. Today the whole program of public relations on a large scale is an established fact in the college organization, and that the public should know of the policy of the College is an accepted fact. Expectations about the amount of counsel needed for students have expanded through the years. Deans' offices are busier than ever, and the relationships between them and those of Placement and Health are close and constant. The machinery of operation is increasingly complicated. For all these years the College has been in a constant state of change. Whether or not it can still merit the reputation of "organizational efficiency" is more debatable than its claim to "intellectual vigor".

That Wellesley has proved to be a place of "gracious friendliness" is self-evident to a retiring president. The friendship of the numerous individuals who are and have been the Wellesley College I have known is a treasured possession. I was astonished to realize that there are only some seventy-five members of the Academic Council who were on the faculty twelve years ago. This was no more startling than the realization that only three of the active members of the Board of Trustees have survived my entire presidency. The other twenty-three have all joined the Board during these past thirteen years. In this organization whose members come and go with such surprising rapidity there are many friends of former years who are not actively related to the College whose continued interest has strengthened the hand and lightened the heart of a college president through the years. It is with complete confidence in the future of the College that I joyfully join that group of alumnae, employees, faculty, trustees who have graduated from active responsibility for the daily routine of academic life. With so many of them I expect to look back to these years at Wellesley as a period of unusual opportunity for personal privilege. If there is any way in which I can serve the College in the future I want to be called upon to render that service.

This is not suggested as a merely personal way to repay personal indebtedness for thirteen gloriously happy years. It is an effort to maintain voluntary identity with an institution which I consider a profoundly important one for the destiny of the nation. The nation and the world need citizens who insist on making their home communities as clean, as fresh, as cosmopolitan, as free, as cooperative, as intelligent as the one we call Wellesley College. To supply that demand is the great responsibility of a college "founded for the glory of God and the service of the Lord Jesus Christ by the education and culture of women". It is an honor to have been associated with such a college through these years, an honor I shall cherish through all the years ahead. To President Clapp, especially, I offer the heartfelt congratulations of the only other person who really knows what a privilege it is to be the President of Wellesley College.

Respectfully submitted,

MILDRED MCAFEE HORTON,
President.

REPORT OF THE TREASURER

1948-1949

To the Trustees of Wellesley College:

The report of the Treasurer for the year ended June 30, 1949 is submitted herewith. This report, with the various supporting schedules, sets forth the financial condition of the College.

CURRENT OPERATIONS

Although this marks the fifth consecutive year that operating expenditures have exceeded operating income, the size of the deficit was greatly reduced and the outlook is such that a balanced budget should result for the 1949-1950 fiscal year. This year's deficit was $58,825.80, as contrasted with $174,027.85 a year ago. The substantial improvement was due entirely to increased income rather than to any decrease in expenses. Actually, total expenditures from Current Funds increased $17,669.25 which was mainly due to an increase in salaries of $83,643.69. Other expenses on balance, therefore, showed a decrease for the first time since the end of the war. This is a very encouraging factor and should justify some degree of confidence that the latest increase in tuitions will be adequate to restore the College budget to a healthy balanced condition. This year, income received from student fees increased $89,080.14, income available for scholarships increased $24,805.37 and income from endowment funds allocated for current expenses increased $17,172.98. The total of these three items accounts for $131,058.49 out of the total increase in current income of $132,871.30.

When considering the deficit of $58,825.80, it should be borne in mind that this figure was arrived at after assigning income to the funds at the rate of 5%. Actually the rate of return on book value of Endowment Funds was 5.19% (5.11% after amortization) which compares with 4.97% the previous year. In addition to this, $22,819.65 of unassigned income was added to

Securities Income Reserve Fund and $49,877.38 of interest was credited to the various Reserve Funds at the rate of 5% as shown below. Thus, it is apparent that $72,697.03 of income was actually added to the various Reserve Funds during the year, which figure exceeds the reported deficit of $58,825.80 by $13,871.23.

RESERVE FUNDS

The less favorable side of the picture, however, is represented by the fact that deficits of the past five years have reached the staggering total of $526,618.78. Fortunately, our Reserve Funds had been built up in previous years to a position where they were able to absorb these heavy deficits, but it is important to restore them to their former strong condition as rapidly as possible.

CHANGES IN RESERVE FUNDS DURING 1948-1949

| | June 30, 1949 | June 30, 1948 | Increase or Decrease |
|--|-----------------------|---------------------|-------------------------|
| Administrative Reserve Fund | $ 54,920.08 | $ 42,818.44 | $12,101.64 |
| Reserve Fund for Depreciation of Buildings | 373,888.85 | 438,063.30 | —64,174.45 |
| Securities Income Reserve Fund .. | 342,161.03 | 304,134.65 | 38,026.38 |
| Undistributed Profit or Loss on Investments Sold (Net Profit) . . . | 242,881.33 | 213,852.82 | 29,028.51 |
| | $1,013,851.29 | $998,869.21 | $14,982.08 |

Interest was credited to the Reserve Funds at the rate of 5% as shown below:

|---|--------------------|
| Administrative Reserve Fund | $ 2,103.42 |
| Reserve Fund for Depreciation of Buildings | 21,069.01 |
| Securities Income Reserve Fund | 15,206.73 |
| Undistributed Profit or Loss on Investments Sold (Net Profit) | *11,498.22 |
| | $49,877.38 |

*Transferred to Administrative Reserve Fund.

It is apparent from the above schedules that the chief strength of our reserve position lies in the Securities Income Reserve Fund and the Undistributed Profit on Investments Sold Account. The Administrative Reserve Fund, although it is currently shown on the books at $54,920.08, in reality has borrowed $266,392.37 from Reserve Fund for Depreciation of Buildings which indicates that it actually is in the red by $211,472.29.

TREASURER'S REPORT

The Reserve Fund for Depreciation of Buildings shows on the books at $373,888.85, not including the $266,392.37 owed by the Administrative Reserve Fund. This figure now represents only 1.58% of the appraised value of all buildings as compared with $845,876.47, or 6.35% five years ago. The depletion of this particular Fund is a major cause for concern and it is vital that the College budgets over the next few years permit at least the repayment of the amount of money borrowed by the Administrative Reserve Fund. Even if this repayment had been made as of June 30, 1949, the Buildings Reserve Fund would have stood at only $640,281.22, or 2.70% of the present appraised value of all buildings, which must be considered dangerously low.

PLANT AND RELATED MATTERS

The College continued to find it necessary to provide additional housing facilities for faculty and staff members. After considerable study, in the spring of 1949, it was decided to build five individual houses for faculty quarters on the southeasterly side of Washington Street. Furthermore, applications were made to the Town of Wellesley for permission to convert the Katharine Lee Bates house on Curve Street into an apartment building for faculty and staff, and to erect another small building at the rear of the Horton House property to provide an additional eight apartments.

There was a net increase of $12,355.63 in plant capital during the year, bringing the total to $13,400,349.31. This net increase reflects the deduction of $30,000 representing two years of amortization from the Navy House account and the addition of the cost of property at 18 Belair Road, Wellesley as well as the cost of new equipment for various departments, dormitories and other buildings.

The following properties are rented for dormitory purposes:

House at Wiswall Circle
Webb House on Washington Street
Joslin House on Washington Street
Elms House on Washington Street

WELLESLEY COLLEGE

Because of the continuing high costs of labor and materials, an increase of $71,000 or about 46% was approved for inclusion in next year's budget to cover repairs and depreciation of buildings.

ENDOWMENT FUNDS

Trust funds increased a net amount of $839,008.03 during the year under review. The following is a summary of the changes:

Additions:

|--|---------------|
| Funds income added to principal | $ 177,253.81 |
| Legacies and gifts added to endowment | 802,370.08 |

WELLESLEY COLLEGE

CONCLUSION

During the past year, the various signs that have indicated for several years the approach of a reversal in the cost-of-living spiral finally materialized, although actually the cost-of-living index for Massachusetts declined only 1%. This stabilization has been of very material assistance in controlling expenses at the College and it is to be hoped that no unwise governmental action will be taken for the sake of political expediency that will start the curve upwards again. For the first time since the war, I can report with considerable confidence the expectation of a balanced budget for the year ahead. This has been accomplished, however, only by the further increase in tuition charges which was voted most reluctantly. No relaxation can be allowed in the efforts to hold down all expenditures to the lowest possible level consistent with sound long-range housekeeping.

As pointed out in the body of this report, our Reserve Funds have seen us through the past five years of heavy deficits, but it behooves those responsible for the financial affairs of the College to see to it that these Reserves are re-established as soon as possible at levels that will place the College in an equally strong position should another period of stringency overtake us.

All employees of the College deserve great credit for their contribution towards the savings that have been effected and the increased efficiency of operation that is reflected in the substantial reduction in the year's deficit. It is to be hoped that these gains will be extended in the year ahead in order that the College will be able to increase its educational service as well as increase the remuneration paid to all those responsible for the success of the College.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN P. CHASE, Treasurer.

TREASURER'S REPORT

REPORT OF AUDITORS

To the Trustees of Wellesley College:

We have examined the balance sheet of Wellesley College as at June 30, 1949, the statement of operating income and expenditures for the year then ended and the supporting schedules appearing on Pages 54 to 96 inclusive in this report. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances. All investment securities owned by the College at June 30, 1949 were either examined or otherwise satisfactorily accounted for; the changes in the investments during the year then ended were audited; and we satisfied ourselves that income from investments receivable within that year was duly received.

In our opinion, the accompanying balance sheet and statement of operating income and expenditures and supporting schedules present fairly the financial position of Wellesley College at June 30, 1949, and the results of its operations for the year then ended.

Notes:

1. The income from certain funds and certain gifts are expendable at the direction of the President and others for purposes not considered part of the College operation. These direct expenditures are not included herein.
2. The income and expenses of the Page Memorial School for the two years have been included in the foregoing statement under the caption "Educational and General" since the school is an adjunct of the Psychology and Education departments and is used by those departments for experimental laboratory purposes. In prior reports the income and expenses of the Page Memorial School have been included under the caption "Auxiliary Enterprises".
3. Expenditures for normal repairs to buildings included herein are detailed as follows:
